

Race, Inequality, and Language in Education (RILE) Conference

October 6-7, 2017

Graduate School of Education at Stanford University

CALL FOR POSTER PROPOSALS

Submission Deadline: Friday, August 4, 2017 (6pm PDT)

The second annual Race, Inequality, and Language in Education (RILE) Conference will focus on concerns about ideas of race, and how it is often used as a mask for discussions of poverty. It also seeks to highlight how scholarship about the impact of poverty often pretends that racism has no bearing on the social construction of impoverished spaces. RILE examines how these issues intersect.

A primary goal of this conference is to bring together scholars from the GSE and other institutions in the California Bay Area and around the nation who focus their research in the areas of race, language, culture, and inequality. In particular, we will focus on understanding theories of race, and will also explore methods for studying the impact of race. Ultimately, our overarching goal is to have the Bay Area become the prototype for how to coalesce universities to better understand these complex issues.

The RILE Faculty, Chair for the RILE program, Dr. Arnetha Ball, and the RILE research conference graduate student committee, would like to invite graduate students to present their research during this conference.

POSTER SESSION FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

Individual or small group posters by graduate students will be presented in a poster session during the second day of the conference on Saturday, October 7th, 2017 from 11:30 am to 1:00 pm. We are interested in poster proposals that contribute to and advance conversations about research on race, language, culture, and/or inequality in education. Proposals must include a title and summary (200 words maximum). You will be asked to include all author names, titles, affiliations, contact information, and a summary abstract of your research.

SUBMISSION PROCESS

We are using an online submission process for the conference. The submission portal is available: Friday, July 21, 2017 and will remain open until Friday, August 4, 2017. We will review proposals by Friday, August 11, 2017 and contact all participants shortly after the proposal review process is completed.
