

EDUC 388F-- Pre-Fall 2019
FOUNDATIONS OF CLASSROOM LANGUAGE
“Language Workshop”

INSTRUCTOR: Laura Hill-Bonnet

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course will explore how language is used in school with the dual goals of identifying both opportunities for students to use home languages and dialects in the classroom as well as linguistic challenges students face. Through an investigation of language structure, linguistic variation, and sociolinguistics, we will challenge the notion of “standard” English and reflect on its relationship to race and power. These goals are designed to provide a critical lens for understanding of how the language of schooling (typically thought of as “academic language”) is constructed, developed, and ultimately taught and promoted in classrooms

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS FRAMING THIS COURSE

- How do students and teachers actually use language in (and out of) classrooms?
- Why--or for what purposes-- do students and teachers use language in the classroom?
- How do our social expectations of language use shape interaction in classrooms?

California Standards for the Teaching Profession (CSTP) addressed in this course include (but are not limited to):

- CSTP 1.2 - Connecting learning to students’ prior knowledge, backgrounds, life experiences, and interests using culturally responsive instructional practices
- CSTP 3.2 - Applying knowledge of the range and characteristics of student development and proficiencies to ensure student understanding of subject matter
- CSTP 3.6 Addressing the needs of the full range of English learners using assessment data and research-based instructional approaches to provide equitable access to learning
- CSTP 4.1 Planning instruction using knowledge of students’ academic readiness, language proficiency, cultural and socioeconomic backgrounds, and individual development
